

The American Feather

Full Bio

Born into a musical family in the rural town of Perdido Beach, Alabama, Natalie was homeschooled and spent a lot of her time writing songs in her journal. She quickly took to playing her dad's guitar and the family piano to accompany the songs she wrote.

After two years at Western Texas College where she competed on the college rodeo team and majored in Theatre, Natalie packed her bags and headed to Nashville, TN. In 2014, she and a close colleague started a children's band called, The Sock Rockerz, and began touring at schools, libraries, and fairs nation wide. The colorful girls were a huge success and toured for 6 years. While on tour, a band member's great uncle commented that Natalie and his great niece were "Little Feathers, floating across the country". Natalie loved the metaphor and The American Feather was born.

After learning of the emerging music scene on the streaming service, Twitch, Natalie took to streaming three days a week, and building a loyal fan base. Soft tones and alluring melodies, The American Feather is the easy listening and coffeehouse vibe to wind down to at the end of a stressful day. Drenched in soul from her southern roots, she weaves together storytelling that reminds us of the folk singers we loved from the 60s. She blends her lyrics seamlessly with melodies that feel both timeless and brand new.
